Johann Rottenhöfer (1806-1872) was a well-known German chef of the 19th century and the author of an important cookbook. The later steward of the Bavarian kings Maximilian II. And Ludwig II. Was a representative of the upscale "courtly" kitchen. He was "head cook" at the Bavarian royal court in Munich, which means according to the economic Encyclopedia of state, city, household and agriculture, that he - in contrast to the "court cook" - only prepared food for the "master's table", so for the royal family and their guests. In 1858 he published his cookbook Rottenhöfer Instruction in the Fine Art of Cooking, which was used with its 2345 recipes for decades after his death by other chefs. £150.00

[26020] Clark, Lady. Cookery Book of Lady Clark of Tillypronie, The . Lewes: Southover Press, 1994. First Thus. 8vo - over 7¾" - 9¾" tall. Hardcover. Inscribed by Clarissa Dickson Wright. Good / Good. ISBN: 1-870962-10-9. First published in 1909. This unabridged reprint makes it possible, for the first time since the original edition of ninety years ago, to cook from, read and enjoy Lady Clark's great book. Lady Clark began her cookery notebooks in the 1840s and kept on with them until her death in the late 19th century. This valuable collection of recipes, with variations, shows us what food was eaten during that time and is a particularly stimulating source book for anyone interested in cooking. Introduction by Geraldene Holt. Short title page is
